On Wednesday, January 16, 1991, a construction worker discovered a green canvass military style duffle bag lying in a ditch along the 700 block of General Booth Blvd, less than a mile from the Virginia Marine Science Museum, which was under construction at the time. The bag was opened and the gruesome discovery of a human body was found inside. The body was identified as Karen Ann Wheeler, a 21 year old white female who had blonde dyed hair and blue eyes. She was described as 5' 1" tall, weighing 120 pounds; she had a scar on her left hand.

Karen was last seen on November 29, 1990. She lived and hung out at the oceanfront of Virginia Beach.
